

“Control your destiny – or someone else will” Jack Welch

Some days you find it difficult to remember why it was that you got into healthcare in the first place. We suspect that whether as a manager, clinician or other healthcare professional, your wish was to make a difference: a difference to people's lives.

Some days it seems that your life is more about structures, re-organisation and targets than it is about people.

The NHS is iconic; the envy of many and bettered by few. But standing still is never an option. We understand that your challenge is to deliver an appropriate and sustainable healthcare system in the face of an unprecedented set of demographic and financial challenges. You must find new and innovative ways of delivering better health outcomes particularly for those in greatest need.

You're accountable. You need control.

Put simply data is the key. You can't do it without the data. You have to analyse the data. You have to understand the data and then turn it into meaningful action. Without it, the business drives you, not you the business.

But like you, we never forget that at the end of every piece of data there is a person.

'Data data everywhere.' But what you really need is intelligence because intelligence – the right information, in the right place at the right time – gives you the assurance and the confidence to make informed decisions.

Many offer it – few understand it the way that Sollis does. We deliver healthcare intelligence.

Sollis was founded by ex-NHS professionals. We have been at the forefront of information management and health analytics since 1994. We have hundreds of man years of experience working in health and this is reflected in our 'best of class' technology solutions.

Experience: The Difference

Making a difference is what we believe in. It's what we do. More than just a supplier – rather a trusted partner. Part of the NHS fabric.

At Sollis we provide the systems, intelligence, insights, understanding and unrivalled experience that turns data into actionable control. Control over activity, finance, performance and outcomes. Control that delivers results. Control that gives you the time to do what really drives you... making a difference to people's lives.

Together: Putting you in Control
